Japan Aviation high school is proud of our strong traditions built over a long history of education.

Our school was established in 1932 and was the first private aviation training academy in Japan. Most of our students are hired by industry leaders even before graduating. After graduation our alumni find that their degree from JAA brings respect from employers throughout many different industries.

※Our correspondence graduates earn direct admission into JAA's network of colleges. Our correspondence high school not only has its own history going back 21 years but is backed by our extensive history in education. This experience has allowed us to shape a program built on our rock solid foundation giving our parents and students a unique sense of security in their students future when they earn the same diploma as our on-campus students.

We have two admission periods each year one in the spring and one in the fall with transfer students being eligible anytime. The entrance requirements include a transcript review and an interview.

With a middle school diploma anyone can enroll at any age. We have a credit transfer system to give students credit for classes completed at different institutions. We even have a high school certificate examination prep course.

Point

In-person attendance as few as 4 days.

Classes can be completed with a minimum of 4 days of in-person instruction at any of the many learning centers all over the country or students can choose to go to school everyday. Being able to choose a center close to home puts many of our students' and parents' minds at ease because of the convenience and security of a short commute.

Students have direct access to teachers by phone call, text, and email.

Our students have clothing choices.

JAA correspondence school is unique because we offer students the choice to dress in their personal style or wear our school uniform.
